NEW QUESTION: 3

An IS auditor discovers that developers have operator access to the command line of a production environment operating system. Which of the following controls would BEST mitigate the risk of undetected and unauthorized program changes to the production environment?

- A. Commands typed on the command line are logged
- B. Hash keys are calculated periodically for programs and matched against hash keys calculated for the most recent authorized versions of the programs
- C. Access to the operating system command line is granted through an access restriction tool with preapproved rights
- D. Software development tools and compilers have been removed from the production environment

Answer: B

Explanation:

The matching of hash keys over time would allow detection of changes to files. Choice A is incorrect because having a log is not a control, reviewing the log is a control. Choice C is incorrect because the access was already granted-it does not matter how. Choice D is wrong because files can be copied to and from the production environment.
